EXTRACTS CHILD LOVE.

Many have loved me, I have loved my fill; Not muimpersioned bath my life course sun; Yet sometimes, when the voices small and still. Come whispering softly from the e'er and done, With bears, regrots, and blighted longings lader, As wandering night sire with mysterioge dow. My soul strains backward to the simple maiden, The one Child-love that did my heart transfuse With love's first exultation ; and I'm fain o doom I ne er shall feel such love again, We were too young to speak or think of love, But such on each a subtle influence bore. Housed in my boy's breast, like a firstling dove, Else care-bereit, her timid trust gave o'er Remoter seeking while a glance from her Was rainbow to my spirit when at atorm. And, as with older lovers, in the stir. Of shy attentions, with requitals warm, We round our little love flower carelessly --Thoughtless-of what its fature bloom might be. Death found her dicaming, like a weary flower, And placked her ordishe woke. Soon busy life Flowed in butween; and dreams of fame and power Maturer loves, the heyday of the strife. And all the fleeting imagery of Change Have swort nerves the little grave since then You still my thoughts through all the vista range . To kneel and pondor at its foot again; And, all regardless of Time, Fute and Will,

AN INTERESTING PUZZLE. A young men asked an old man for his daughter in marriage. The answer was "Go into the orchard and bring in a parcel of upples. Give me one half nof the whole number, and the mother one-bulf of the balance and half an apple over, and the daughter one-half of the remainder and half an apple over, and have one left for yourself, without cutting the apple; and then, if she is willing you can have her."-He solved the question and how many did he bring? Fourteen, as you can easily prove. The old man was to have one-half of the apples, which would be seven. The mother was to have one half of the balance, which would be three and a half, and Half an apple over, which would make noticing the traces of former settlements and four apples for her. There would be three apples left, of which the daughter was to bave one-half and half an apple over, which would give her two, and leave the lover his. one, "without cutting the apple.
